Our meeting was orchestrated through a family arrangement, a planned introduction that brought Ranjan into my life. The memory of that initial "hello" text from him on February 21, 2023, remains vivid in my mind. From that very day, our communication began, and I felt an inexplicable connection with him. We shared an abundance of common interests, habits, and even the minutiae – from sharing the same zodiac sign and food preferences to having the same lucky number. It seemed as if the universe was aligning.

His caring nature, innocence, and his ability to genuinely listen to me had a profound impact on me. Our video chats, lasting for hours, might have been filled with seemingly trivial conversations, but deep down, I knew he was the one. Time passed, and Ranjan arrived in Nepal on June 1, 2023. Our first meeting took place at an ice cream parlor, where my nervousness was palpable. However, the hours we spent talking about an array of topics helped us both relax and connect.

The following day, we met again at Sauraha Chitwan, a renowned tourism spot. Ranjan gifted me chocolates and a present, which held deep meaning for me. The subsequent meetings held great significance – he would pick me up from work, and we shared unforgettable moments together. These interactions solidified our bond, making it even stronger. The decision to be together became a natural one, and our families rejoiced at the news. A collective decision was made, and June 13, 2022, was set as the date of our engagement.

On that appointed day, we got engaged, marking the beginning of a journey we were both eager to undertake. Although Ranjan had only a brief three-week vacation, we faced the challenge of managing all the preparations in such a short time. The pressure was real, yet we managed to navigate everything successfully. Our court marriage followed on June 16, 2023, with the presence and blessings of both our parents. Their happiness and support on that day are etched in my memory. The start of our new life together was filled with joy, and we look forward to creating a future that's bound by love, understanding, and shared aspirations.

Due to Ranjan's limited time and work commitments, our time together in Nepal was short-lived. Despite the constraints, we were determined to make every moment count and create cherished memories. In those fleeting days, we embarked on long rides, indulged in street foods, explored romantic spots, captured numerous pictures, and most importantly, had an immense amount of fun. Even though the weather was scorching and we ended up sweaty, the joy of being together overshadowed any discomfort.

One memorable memory is when Ranjan gave me his shirt, the same one he had worn during his first visit to my home. This gesture held deep sentiment, connecting us even further. As his departure date drew closer, we both felt the weight of our emotions at the airport. However, our parting was accompanied by a promise to reunite soon.

Looking ahead, Ranjan has plans to visit Nepal again on November 21, 2023. This time around, we are determined to explore all the places we missed during his previous visit. Our goal is to make the most of his time here, soaking in the experiences, and spending quality time together. Despite the distances and time constraints, our connection remains strong, and our anticipation for our next meeting is growing with each passing day.

I am presently residing with my parents. I worked as a nurse in a hospital when I first met Ranjan, and I have decided to continue my work even after our marriage. Living with my parents not only allows me to easily commute to and from work but also provides me with the support I need. During my off-duty hours, I make it a point to visit my father and mother-in-law, who shower me with affection. I consider myself fortunate to have them in my life. Having a job and the support of my parents lessens my financial dependency, even though Ranjan still sends me funds through Sunrise Limited Bank.

While we had a strong desire to open a joint account, the constraints of time and other commitments prevented us from doing so. With Ranjan planning to visit Nepal again in November 2023, we are looking forward to finally opening a joint account in Nepal. As I prepare to relocate to Australia, we also have plans to establish another joint account in the near future. Our financial decisions are a testament to our commitment to building a life together, where we share not only our joys and experiences but also our responsibilities and future plans.

While we haven't had the opportunity to live together for an extended period, the time we did spend together allowed us to share common household responsibilities. We both contributed to maintaining our home: Ranjan would cook, and I would handle washing the dishes and cleaning up. Laundry duties were split as well – he handled the washing machine, and I took care of drying. Our teamwork in these everyday tasks symbolized our commitment to each other.

Our relationship as husband and wife is genuine and steadfast. We have discovered shared interests and aligned goals that inspire us to envision a promising future together. Through life's highs and lows, we have vowed to stand by each other's side. Our mutual support has been unwavering in every step of our journey. Ranjan guides me, respects me, and loves me deeply, just as I do for him. The purity and genuineness of our relationship are unparalleled.

In our spare moments, we often engage in video calls, using this time to share every little detail of our lives with each other. This constant communication helps us bridge any physical distance and remain connected in a meaningful way. Our bond is built on trust, respect, and a profound understanding of each other, making our relationship truly special and genuine.

In conclusion, our relationship, which we've nurtured and cultivated as husband and wife, is an epitome of purity, authenticity, and selflessness. Every girl envisions finding the perfect life partner, and I am profoundly grateful to my family for their role in connecting me with Ranjan. Calling him my husband fills me with a deep sense of gratitude and joy.

The prospect of embarking on a new chapter in Australia, together with Ranjan, fills me with eagerness and excitement. The anticipation of exploring the world hand in hand, learning from each other, and growing as individuals and as a couple is a dream we both share. With unwavering belief, we look forward to the realization of these aspirations in the near future. The path ahead is bright, and I eagerly await all the wonderful experiences that lie ahead with Ranjan by my side.
